THANK YOU, MICHAEL BLOOMBERG!

BY KIKI TIDWELL

If you should happen to see Michael Bloomberg here this week for the Allen & Company Conference, you might want to thank him for helping to save our future here in the Wood River Valley. Mr. Bloomberg has previously spent $500 million to retire coal-fired power plants in the U.S., and now has pledged an additional $500 million in a Beyond Carbon effort to support climate champions at the state and local government levels. This is where change is going to come from—from government champions in communities like ours supporting switching over to solar-powered electric buses from diesel ones, building community solar farms generating electricity close to where it is used, and committing to 100 percent renewable energy with batteries backup.

You may not remember this, but for decades 50 percent of Idaho's power came from coal-fired power plants in the states surrounding us—Nevada, Oregon and Wyoming. Back in 2008, Idaho Power wanted to build a coal plant in Jerome! I, along with some other brave souls and dedicated groups, undertook a shareholder initiative to change Idaho Power's direction from dependence on coal, and we were successful—the shareholders spoke. <https://tidwellcommissionercampaign.files.wordpress.com/2019/04/high-country-news-2013.pdf>

Bloomberg's site, <https://www.beyondcarbon.org>, states, "Renewable energy sources, including wind and solar, are emissions-free and cheaper than coal power—and they create more jobs and enhance local economic development." Yes, you heard that right! Solar is now the least cost form of energy.

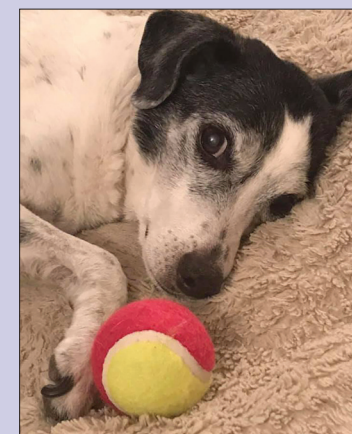

Thanks, Michael Bloomberg, for saving our winters and our future here!
